Netzley Tells of Housing Situation Here

The housing situation for pupils in the Lemon Grove School District is serious, and the following letter written by Supt. Netzley to Assemblywoman Katherine Niehouse tells a sad, sad story.

Lemon Grove just must be included in the recent allocation of state funds, and a consequence, the youngsters will continue on double session for a long tome.

Supt. Netzley's letter:

In view of the opinion handed down by the Attorney General concerning the accrual and sale of bonds under Chapter 1389, (two hundred and fifty million dollar school bond issue), it seems certain now that applicant school districts are faced with long and serious delays in initiating their school building program. As you know, the Attorney General ruled that the beginning date for the accrual of the second fifty million dollar block of bonds was June, 1950. This means that in September, the proposed date for the next Allocation Board meeting, only fifteen million dollars would be available for allocation, and further that it would be about April 1, 1951, before a total of fifty million would have accrued.

It seems to us that immediate corrective legislation should be prepared for submission to the legislature at the earliest possible date. This legislation should make money available to school districts just as fast as applications are processed and approved for allocation.

The Lemon Grove Situation

To make this point clear we would like to explain the situation in the Lemon Grove School District in view of the ruling by the Attorney General. When school opens next month we will enroll approximately 1830 pupils. Over 1500 will be on double session — Kindergarten through grade 6. Since we can expect no immediate allocation, this district will be unable to provide any classrooms before September, 1951. Our estimated enrollment for September, 1951 shows that very child will be on double session and many will be forced to attend triple sessions.

Based on the priority system adopted at the last meeting of the legislature, the Lemon Grove School District is about forty-fourth on the list of districts yet to receive allocation. Approximately six million dollars will have to be allocated before this school district will be eligible. Since the bonds are to accrue at the rate of five million dollars per month, starting June 1950, this means that money would be available to this district in June, 1951 and, of course, there is always the possibility of applications with higher priority being submitted.

You might well wonder why a distsict with such extreme

Enroll School Children Now

If parents have not already enrolled their children, they are urged to do so at once. By enrolling before school starts, the problems of bus transportation and placing of children in classes can be solved earlier.

Registrations are now being taken for all schools before school starts, at the Lemon Grove School office, Lincoln and School Lane.

If kindergarten and first grade children are not enrolled during the first month, they will not be entitled to enter school through the entire year. This condition is controlled by a State Law.

Next Monday class lists will be posted at the registration offices of all schools so that parents may learn to which class their child has been assigned.

Changes on the lists will not be made unless it is necessary due to overloaded classes or bus transportation problems.

Mr. Shimp was hit on the right side and has nine broken ribs, contusions and bruises on the left arm. He was so badly crushed that attendants thought he had been killed but he is rallying valiantly and attending doctors say he has a fine chance of recovery if they can prevent pneumonia from developing.

THE TITLE SHE THREW AWAY

Virginia Phillips was born under one of the luckiest stars ever to shine on a California girl. She was born to social position; born to uncommon beauty. Fifteen years ago she was a San Francisco society belle. Charles Dana Gibson once selected her as one of the loveliest women of her generation.

She made a brilliant marriage, to an Italian nobleman of ancient family, and became the Marchesa Rolando Dalla Rosa-Prati. But there was a condition to this marriage which she accepted. Italian law required that she give up her American citizenship.

Last week President Truman vetoed a special bill passed by Congress. That bill would have restored her lost American citizenship. The President said she had surrendered her birthright of citizenship "with knowledge of the consequence of her act."

What a common title it is: the title of American citizen! Why 150,000,000 of us have it. All we had to do to get it was be born in this country. It doesn't mean a thing, socially. But, oh, how the 150,000,000 of us, in our possession of that title, must be wistfully envied by the Marchesa Rolando Dalla Rosa-Prati.

WHO IS THE LAW?

What a hullaballoo that was in L. A.'s city hall last week over rent control! To lift controls or not to lift 'em: That was the question. The pro and con din was terrific. National Housing Expediter Tighe Woods proposed a modified control program. Then he said he'd lift all controls. And then a Federal judge back in Washington, D. C., acting on a union request, restrained Woods from doing anything at all until another hearing yet to come up!

While this was going on, pickets outside the city hall even carried placards, one reading: "Who is the law, Tighe Woods or Congress?"

Well, who is "the law" in this case—a case so typical of confusion in the relation of Washington bureaucracy with the people in the fields of regulation and control? Nobody, really, seemed to know!

If these were normal times, a humorist might make something of the L. A. hullabaloo. But the times are far from normal. A new emergency already is upon an anxious Nation. Responsibilities for public welfare far more complex than control of rents loom ominously ahead. It is time that a vast deal of frayed, worn "emergency" red tape hanging over from war days be cleared away. And desperately it is high time that our government clear the decks for sane and reasoned action in all its direct dealing with the American public, regulatory or otherwise—so that at all times all of us may know "who is the law," and what each law really means, and what it is intended to acomplish, and whom it effects, and how!

FROM THE NEWS CIRCUIT

JAMES DORAIS

There is mounting evidence that the American people, sobered by the magnitude of the job that quickly must be done to build the Nation's defenses, are in no mood to allow the country's resources to be squandered in boondoggling-as-usual Government projects for non-defense purposes.

Many such projects, however, are life-long dreams of powerfully placed bureaucrats in Federal agencies. Regardless of Korea and the prospect of future Koreas, the Government planners can be counted on not to relinquish those dreams without a struggle. To the contrary, it can be expected that the threat of war will be used as an attempt to justify continued expenditures for many projects essentially of a non-defense nature.

Representative Norris Poulson of California undoubtedly had that likelihood in mind when he warned Congress to be on guard against attempts by the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation to seek approval for projects on its planning boards by "wrapping them in the American Flag."

Last week—only a few days after Representative Poulson's statement—the Interior Department of which the Bureau of Reclamation is a part, laid down rules for cutting back civil public works projects that do not contribute to national defense.

Obviously the rules were issued in response to public pressure. But the first rule bore out California Congressman's warning. This is it:

"Because of direct connection with national security, work will continue undiminished on all power construction except where power output would be slight and incidental to other functions."

In the past, advocates of Government ownership of power have used every conceivable artifice in seeking Congressional approval for their plans, by tying public power into irrigation development, flood control and navigation, by juggling bookkeeping to conceal actual costs and by flagrant propaganda at public expense. But Korea makes the task more simple. Henceforth, public power is to be justified because of "direct connection with national security."

Of course electric power is essential to national security. But not public power.

The steel, alumfnum, oil, automobile, airplane and chemical industries all are essential to national security. The Nation's vast railroad network is essential to national security. But after the country's disastrous experience in nationalizing the rails in World War I, the railroads were left in private hands during World War II and did a magnificent job. No one openly advocates their nationalization today.

The private power industry, presently engaged in the greatest expansion program in its history, is as ready for the gigantic tasks that military defense may demand as other major American industries. But the Government planners are impressed. They are too interested in making their dreams come true, come war or peace.

Political Parade

CLEM WHITAKER, Jr.

How will it go in November? Are the Democrats slated for victory? Or, are the Republicans, at long last, to sip from its heady cup?

No one now knows what the outcome will be. Brash prognosticators are making predictions certainly. But a new temper has taken hold of the American people. It is the temper of war. Shortly the political effects of Korea will seep into the consciousness of the electorate and then—and only then—will the outcome of the November 7 election be decided.

Should the sorely tried people of America see the tide of battle in Korea still strongly against their fighting men, analysts put a mark against the chances of the Democrats. To the contrary, if the Soviet Koreans are fought to the defensive, Democrats, the experts say, will find the going a trifle easier.

Paramount in importance, however, to the decision will be the answer to the question: Is the responsibility of this war squarely on the soft policy of an Administration that invited attack, then suddenly realized its implications and sent almost unarmed Americans to face a tested, battle-hardened foe?

The American people want to know the answer to that question. They have a right to know whether we are forced to act because the Government was hoodwinked into believing that peace with Russia was just around the corner or whether the decision was a matter of acting in Korea—giving notice to the Soviets that Russian aggression was at an end—and bringing a halt to the gradual program of acquisition by Russia.

America has the right to know, too, whether the Administration suddenly awoke to finding America sucked in on every Soviet trap play and as a consequence suddenly reversed its entire foreign policy in Asia.

If the people should find themselves in agreement with Harold Stassen, there is little question but that there will be a Democratic rout in November. Stassen charges that "this Administration, one of the most incompetent in our Nation's lifetime, has sown so many pink seeds that now the American people must reap a red whirlwind."

Should the voters decide America, in all honesty, has done its best for world peace and profoundly charted course toward that end, there is every reason to believe that the election will result, largely, in a Democratic victory.

In any event, if the people's decision of war responsibility is made prior to November 7, whatever that decision it will show dramatically. For politics are as irrevocably tied to this war as guns and ammunition. If it wasn't for politics, the war might never have come.

Talks and Walks With Mother Nature

BY TRIXIE TREGANZA

WILD GOOSE—HONKER

The wild goose has head and neck glossy black; a large white triangular patch on either cheek, with the two usually confluent on throat. Occasionally an indistinct white collar is at the base of the black; back and wings are grayish brown; forebreast and below is lighter grayish brown, tipped with pale fulvuous or grayish white. Heavier toned on the sides, presents a shingled appearance and shading into color of black, lower belly, under tail coverts. Longer upper tail coverts flanks well up on rump, pure white, rump and tail are black, primaries blackening at tips. The bill is black and feet dusky.

The nest usually is made of twigs, reeds, weed-stems, grasses and the like. It is usually lined with down and placed off the ground on top of a high mound. The eggs are four to seven pure white. The Canada Goose nests in North America breeding from central western states and northern California north to extreme Alaska and the Artic coast and islands. It winters in south to southern states.

Honk, honk, honk, honk! What a stirring sound is that which summons us from whatever task indoors, and hurries us out hatless, breathless into the crisp March air to behold a company of wild geese passing forward into the frosty night!

Honk, honk, we think madly of our gun upstairs, for the geese are provokingly near, and we hear the thrilling swish of the low-sweeping wings. We take it out in great boasts to our similarly hatless neighbor, of what we could have done if the gun had been put together and we had known that those foolish geese were coming right over our town. And when the birds become a row of trailing points on the northern sky, a fever of strange unrest burns within our veins and we wonder what ancestral folly our wings were clipped, and our race condemned to unceasing barnyard toil.

The Canada goose has only two cardinal points on his compass, North and South, and like most migrants, he does not go by map, nor follow favorite paths through the air, but flies straight over hill and dale, city and hamlet alike, until the goal is reached, or until the weather discourages further movement for a time.

The geese move usually at a considerable height, forming open V-shaped figures, with the oldest or strongest gander in the lead; or else in single oblique lines. Each bird demands as clear a field as possible, and this is best secured by an arrangement wich allows each goose to look over the wing of the one next preceeding, right or left, according to the branch of the V which it occupies. The line of march shifts and changes under the eye as the hindmost birds become dissatisfied with their positions, and change sides or as tired leaders give place to fresher birds; and the changes are accomplished not without much discussion in high pitched honks.

When selecting a pond or corner of the lake in which to spend the night, the birds first circle about cautiously at a safe height, and then slide down the air from a point a mile or so away, approaching the water silently and at a low angle.

In rising from the water or ground, the geese prefer to make a little run or preliminary flutter, to get headway, but are capable of clearing the water or the ground by a sudden jump. The mother goose when leaving her nest usually flutters the down, so that it alights with nothing in sight.

The Canada Goose clears for the North in February instead of in March. Like most geese this species feeds principally upon grass and tender herbage, berries, sage roots and aquatic plants. The stubble fields of the Sacramento Valley have been for three-quarters of a century past the classical resort of the Canada Goose and its congeners.

In winter the birds are very

EXPERIMENT WITH BIGGER GRAPES

Changes may come about in the California table grape industry because of vines bearing larger grapes. Two new varieties of table grapes, now being grown experimentally, developed from the bigger fruit, states Dr. H. P. Olmo, associate professor of viticulture on the Davis campus of the University of California.

The new varieties are being produced from the occasional vines of thick growth and big berries that appear sporadically in vineyards, but are otherwise worthless because of poor yield and growth habit. What is being sought is a vine that can be planted commercially, but retaining the large sized berries.

Dr. Olmo explains that such freak or giant vines have rapidly dividing cells or twice the usual volume, having 76 chromosomes in each cell instead of the normal 38. The chromosomes are the rod-like bodies that carry the hereditary units or genes.

When such plants are hybridized, hereditary traits are recombined and the characteristics of the plants changed. But most important, says Dr. Olmo, the large berry size and good fruitfulness occasionally found in the changed vines point to eventual success for commercial production of larger grapes.

Granddaughter of Mme. Schumann-Heink Weds

Mr. and Mrs. H. Irving Vernier, 8214 Vernier Dr., have announced the approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Zelda Schumann-Heink to Arthur Ranuous Wilmurt, son of Mrs. Clifford Wilmurt of New York City and La Jolla.

Miss Schumann-Heink is the granddaughter of the late internationally famous opera star, Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, and is a singer herself, taking part in many productions of Star Light Opera Company. Miss Schumann-Heink is a native of San Diego, and was graduated from Grossmont High School before entering State College where she was a member of Shen Yo Sorority. She is also a member of Zlac Rowing Club.

In addition to her recent role of Mrs. Tealc in "Roberta," for Star Light Opera, the bride-elect has taken part in many Globe Theatre productions, as well as other local dramatic productions. Her contralto voice has been heard on radio programs both here and in Los Angelcs. Following five years of touring with her late grandmother, she studied at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York City.

Mr. Wilmurt, a graduate of Amherst College and Yale University Drama School, is a member of Theta Delta Chi. He is an associate professor of drama at Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh. He is a brother of William Foster Wilmurt of La Jolla, and is spending the summer in the resort.

During the past few months, Londoners have been walking on sidewalks laid by the Road Research Laboratory to find out how various colors will wear in all weathers, reports the New York Times. Thirteen sections of paving have been laid, each of a different color. So far, red and green have stood up better than other colors. Blue and yellow have not lasted well.

Walks and Talks With Mother Nature

regular about their meals, rising punctually an hour or so before daybreak, and flying to the distant fields to glean for two or three hours the fallen morsels of wheat. The middle of the day is spent upon the pond or in backwater bayou, dabbling for watercress and duckweed or else enjoying one-legged slumbers on the sandbar. Hunger drives them to forage again in the late afternoon, usually to the same spot visited in the morning. At such times the geese are exceedingly vigilant and wary, and it would appear when feeding on the ground one or more of their number are charged with sentry duty.

But the balmy days of shooting are over, they tell us. Our fathers helped themselves a little too liberally. What with market shooting and the increased settling of the Northland, the wild things have been reduced to a shadow of their former substance. The youngster, indeed, may think he is seeing a lot of birds if a dozen honkers thrill his young ears; but the old hand knows that it is about time to put up the gun and to study natural history instead.

Many Dolls of Many Lands

The Doll Exhibit displayed in the windows of the Petite Shop proved most popular last week for there were hundreds who stopped each day and evening to see the dolls.

There were tiny dolls, big dolls, foreign dolls, antiques and modern—a display that was certainly a credit to Mrs. Chaffee and Mrs. Orth, who spent many long hours on details and arrangements.

Mrs. Mearle Pierce, who is a collector of dolls, showed many o'd and antique dolls, among them being two original dressmaker dolls sent from Paris years ago.

Mrs. E. O. Johnson had dolls from Athens and Cuba; Linda Anne Young, a doll from Spain; Mrs. Russell Hewitt, a life sized papoose over a century old; Charlene Craig, dolls imported from Hawaii.

Mrs. Agness Greenwell displayed the doll shown on television recently by Mrs. Mettlack, president of the San Diego Doll Club; Mrs. Sadie Campbell, a doll 61 years old; Mrs. Lea Bultez, a Shirley Temple doll; Mrs. S. Dore, dolls from Czechoslovakia; Mrs. Ingabord Emig, dolls from Denmark; Lou Ann Hines, dolls from Sweden and Mrs. Fred Johnson, a doll brought from England 80 years ago, also a dressmaker doll.

Mrs. Fred Michels furnished a large collection of beautifully dressed bisque dolls.

Mrs. Bertha Orth showed a collection of small bisque dolls which belonged to her little daughter.

Mrs. Ingabord Emig and Mrs. Chaffee both exhibited most interesting collections of doll heads.

There is no doubt that many little girls and perhaps their mothers were inspired to take care of their dolls to start a collection of their own.

Disastrous Fire in County Is Stopped

The devastating Cleveland National Forest - Cuyamaca State Park fire is out, leaving behind it 100 square miles of blackened brush and timber and 28 ruined homes and cabins. The U. S. Forest Service declared the blaze officially under control at 6:32 p. m. Wednesday. Mopping up operations started immediately by 300 firefighters, including Navy men and civilian volunteers, who worked through the night on the entire perimeter.

Termed the most costly San Diego County fire, the fire broke out a week ago in the Conejos Creek area, east of El Capitan Reservoir, racing northward into Cuyamaca State Park and burning southeast to Descanso.

A forest service official said a survey revealed that almost all the structures which were consumed were on property which had not been cleared adequately of fire-hazardous growth.

Wisps of smoke rose from the smouldering ground in some areas Wednesday. All highways in the area are reopened. The firefighting force, which at times totaled 1700 men, had been reduced to about 350 and some vehicles and other equipment were being removed.

It was stimated 53,000 acres of priceless watershed growth had been destroyed in Cleveland National Forest and 11,000 acres of watershed cover blackened on state land.

Source of the fire has not been determined, but federal firefighters said it undoubtedly was "man caused." The fight against the blaze was directed by U. S. Forest Service and State Division of Forestry officials.

Boy Scout Annual Swimming Meet

Boy Scout troops of the Grossmont District are busily preparing these days for their third annual swimming meet to be held at Gillespie Pool, next Thursday evening, at 7 o'clock. As there will be plenty of extra seating space provided, parents and friends of Scouting and those interested in an especially fine meet are especially invited to attend with admission free.

The events scheduled are based on the Scout program which stresses the development of greater swimming skill, thus enabling complete self assurance in the water and the ability to save others from drowning as well as one's self.

The meet will comprise the following events, each of which consists of a race between teams from each of the 18 troops of the Grossmont district — freestyle, backstroke, breaststroke, tired swimmer's, medley relay, surf board and lifeline races, and just to add a little touch of comedy combined with skill there will also be an egg race, candle race and nightgown race.

Each race or event will be composed of two parts, a senior race for boys under -8 years and over 115 pounds, and a junior race for Scouts not exceeding 115 pounds in weight. Points will be given for boys or teams placing first through fourth in each event and suitable awards will be given to winning troops. Clarence Garber, camping and activities chairman of this district, is general chairman of the meet. James Polak will be in charge of the various swimming events.

The residents of the foothills are becoming "swim" conscious as witnessed by the interest shown in the Red Cross swimming classes now in session at Gillespie Pool, and by the intense desire presently being shown by the people of La Mesa for a municipal swimming pool. Many young men were lost during the last war because they couldn't swim. Now, the world is on the brink, perhaps, of another. Any one interested in furthering the swimming ability of the youngsters, is asked to please encourage the Boy Scouts by attending what has become a main annual swimming event in this area.

It is good discretion not to make too much of any man at the first, because one cannot hold out in that proportion.—Bacon.

Netzley Tells of School Housing Situation Here

need has such a low priority rating. Our projected enrollment was prepared in December, 1949 and was approved by the State Department of Education December 9, 1949. Our application was filed with the Department of Finance on April 27, 1950, the third application filed in the State of California. We have not revised our projected enrollment, nor are we permitted to do so even though home building in this area has gone forward at a rate that would give this district a much large projected enrollment and a much higher priority rating. One can easily see that districts filing their applications early are now being penalized since applications filed later can use a more recent date for their projected enrollment.

Parents of children facing continued double session are becoming extremely bitter over the delay in getting additional school construction started. These people voted for the state bond issue believing that it would offer early relief to a very critical school building shortage. They believed that many classrooms would be ready for occupancy within two years from the date the bond issue was voted.

Knowing of your constant interest in education, and the welfare of children in this state, we know that you will do all you can to correct this unfortunate situation.

The nation's little red schoolhouses have been disappearing at the rate of about 12 a day for the last 30 years, the Office of Education, Washington, D. C., said recently. However, according to the New York Daily News, the 75,000 one-teacher schools still in operation account for (a) About half the public schools, (b) about one-twelfth of the nation's teachers, and (c) about one-fifteenth of the enrollments—1,500,000 boys and girls.
